Ten Thousand Miles Without Repairs

Morristown, N. J., May 22, 1907.

The Rainier Company, New York City.

Gentlemen: Ten thousand miles without having been in the repair shop! That is my record to date, and I feel that having passed the ten thousand mile mark this day I should in justice to yourselves acquaint you with this fact. I have owned motor cars for a number of years, and have had various makes, but for efficiency, smooth running, and above all for steady reliability I consider the Rainier first and foremost, and it is a pleasure for me to so testify.

The time consumed in making this mileage was seven months and one day, and during all that time I have never had the motor lay down, and the car is to-day running better than ever.

The expense for tires was exceedingly small—in fact, much less than I expected, and this in my opinion is due to the light weight and perfect balance of the car as a whole.

With best wishes, believe me to be,

Very sincerely yours,

The name of this writer will be furnished to any interested person upon request.

The Rainier in Europe

"I saw Mr. Taylor at the Elysee Palace Hotel just after he had made the run by automobile from Monte Carlo."

"We arrived at Naples on March 14," said Mr. Taylor. "From that time to this we have not had a single accident, a single breakdown."

"The Taylors have not completed their tour yet; they intend to do both France and England thoroughly before their return."

"Mr. Taylor brought his own 35 horsepower Rainier Automobile from New York, and did not have occasion to change the flat tread American tires once."

"The car also proved an excellent hill climber, even when the roads were slippery after rain."

Paris Correspondence, New York Herald, May 26, 1907.

HOTEL BEAT WINS SYMPATHY

"CAPTAIN" ELLIPHSTONE HAD FOUND A NEW ANGEL

And Was About to Sail for Europe With Him

Half a dozen hotels have claimed that they were the first to have released "Captain" Alexander Elliphstone, hotel beat, released from the Tombs on Wednesday last, and held $1,000 bail to Recorder Station in Hoboken yesterday pending a hearing on Thursday next, when extradition will be asked to send him back to this city for swindling H. Miller, the manager of the Caledonia Hotel, in West Twenty-sixth street, out of a board bill of $245 and for giving him three bogus checks, one for $100, another for $50 and another for $30.

The claim of the Caledonia Hotel is only one of half a dozen various hotels in this city. Elliphstone was sent to the workhouse for thirty days in the last part of April for swindling the Hotel Monticello on West Sixty-fourth street out of a hotel bill of $45. The hotel detective, Charles S. Berry, had worked up the case against him and was on the lookout for his release.

Elliphstone had been put up at various clubs in the city on the strength of his "stories" that he formerly had been a Captain in the British army and also a King's courier.

He is a slender, dapper man of 30, speaks several languages fluently and has travelled extensively. He was admitted into some of the elite social circles. When he was arrested he said it was all a mistake and that money would be sent to him in care of the British Consul-General to pay his debts. His hotel creditors were inclined to give credence to his story and so did not push their claims with further arrests.

Elliphstone was released quite early on Wednesday morning from the Tombs, where he had been sent as a trusty, and disappeared. When Detective Berry went to look for him it was found that he had sent to the Hotel Monticello, had paid his bill and had got his baggage out and sent it to Hoboken by way of the Barclay street ferry. "Fraud" was sent out and it was learned that he had applied for lodgings in a cheap place in Hoboken and had not got rooms. When he had come back to this city, his baggage was still in Hoboken and a watch was kept on the ferry. On Memorial Day night he engaged rooms at 25 Second avenue with a German family in humble circumstances. He said he was a German, and when the detectives went to arrest him the family denied having an Englishman in the house. They were deceived by the excellence of his German.

The hotel men say that they learned that Elliphstone had a new angel, a wealthy man of this city whom he had met before, he was sent to jail and who had become impressed with the truth of his hard luck story of money due him that had not been forwarded and that they were to sail from Hoboken for Europe yesterday.

The rich man paying all the bills. It was to prevent his departure that the arrest was made.

Elliphstone lived at the Caledonia Hotel from the middle of December to the middle of March last. In all that time he never paid a cent on his bills. He told Manager Miller, that he was an ex-British army courier, and all of Elliphstone's stories held water with him, and Mr. Miller, feeling the necessity that a soldier always has for a supposed officer and a gentleman, cashed the three checks for him on Harris & Co. of Buffalo, the furnishing Elliphstone with money to carry on his social conquests.

Where Elliphstone got the money to pay the Hotel Monticello's bill is not known, but the hotel men say it was probably from his new angel. The Holland House, 100

SWINDLES TENEMENT DWELLERS

Well Known Crook Accused of Passing as a Health Officer

The police by accident unearthed on Friday night a flimsy scheme the victims of which are supposed to run well up into the hundreds. A well dressed man calls at flats in a tenement and presents a card purporting to be that of a health officer. He demands to look over the flat, finds fault with the sanitary arrangements and threatens the tenant with arrest. The matter is finally adjusted by the victim paying the "health officer" a sum of money, graduated according to the degree of prosperity apparent in the apartment.

Lieuts. Kinsler and Duggan ran into Charles Young, otherwise Dutch Charlie, and George Waters at Second avenue and Houston street on Friday night. Young has served seven terms for various bunco operations, and the detectives were curious to know what he was up to, so they arrested him on general principles and took him over to Police Headquarters.

In Dutch Charlie's pockets was found a quantity of cards bearing the inscription "Edward Armstrong, Headquarters Health Officer," and giving the address and telephone number of the Board of Health. The detectives called up the Health Department and were told that no such name was known there. They asked if any complaints had been received by the department of men purporting to be health officers. The answer was that hundreds of such complaints had been received, but that no note had been taken of the names of the victims.

"We just listen to what they have to say and let it go at that," the voice at the Department of Health end of the phone is reported as saying.

Young was arraigned before Magistrate Wahle in the Essex Market police court yesterday morning and held in $5,000 bail for examination on Monday. The police have a complaint from Mrs. A. Drzewanski of 551 East Sixteenth street of a game similar to that which Young is believed to have been working, of which she says she was a victim on October 5 last. She gave up $10. A memorandum book found in Young's possession contains a number of names and addresses of some of them followed by notes such as "Good," "In trouble there," etc.

PETTY PICKINGS OF POLITICS

JOIN THE ALDERMAN'S CLUB OR GET NO NEWS STAND.

And if You Squal Under the Harrow You Get None Anyway—Alderman John J. Cronin Goes Around With a Reporter and Helps Turn Up a Fact or Two.

Alderman John J. Cronin, who is under indictment by the Grand Jury on charges of boodling, went on a hunt yesterday in his district to show that he was not a grafter, as he expressed it. A letter was received at the Cronin office in which the writer charged that Alderman Cronin had refused a permit for a news stand unless the applicant first joined the John J. Cronin Association, which has clubrooms at the northwest corner of Sixty-third street and Second avenue. A SUN reporter called on the Alderman at his home at 342 East Fifty-eighth street to ask him if the charge was true.

"What's the use of my saying anything?" he said. "You won't print the truth any way. Print what you want."

At this point Mrs. Cronin interfered. "Take the reporter out and show him that it's a lie," she said.

The Alderman thought it over and then got his hat and dared the reporter to show him any graft.

Outside the grocery store kept by Charles G. Henkel, at the corner of Fifty-eighth street and Second avenue, is the news stand of J. Dunes. The Alderman and the reporter went to the corner and found Dunes.

"Is it true that Alderman Cronin asked you to pay $15 for a permit to run your stand?" Dunes was asked.

"I went to his clubrooms to get my permit and was told that I would have to pay $5 in advance if I wanted any permit," said Dunes.

"What was the money to be paid for?" was asked.

"To join the club," said Dunes.

"I didn't ask you for any money, did I?" asked the Alderman.

"No, you didn't ask me yourself, but your secretary did and you were present," said Dunes.

"But I didn't ask you, did I?" asked the Alderman again.

"No, but you were present," reiterated the newsdealer.

"Is it true that all the newsdealers pay for the privilege of selling papers by joining your club?" the Alderman was asked.

"They all pay to join my club. They all belong, too, every damn one of them. They have to, and the rest of them have never put up any kick," said the Alderman with indignation. "No one can say I ever took money. I wish I wasn't an Alderman, anyway."

According to the story told by Dunes he kept two stands; the other one at the corner of Fifty-seventh street and run by his wife. When he went to Cronin to get his permit for a license he was told that he would have to give up $25, reduced price for two memberships in the club. This he refused to do and a member of the club named Coffey was installed in the Fifty-seventh street stand under the elevated station.

Dunes then told about the neighborhood what he had been told about getting his permit and was summoned to the club. There, in the presence of Cronin, ex-Alderman Story and others, he said that he was mistaken in saying that Cronin had asked him for money, but that it was the club secretary who had demanded the money.

"I'm not responsible for what the secretary asks for, am I?" demanded Cronin.

"At all events Dunes didn't get his permit and hasn't got one now."

"And he won't get one after what he has said about me," said the Alderman yesterday.

Some people in the district lay Dunes' troubles to the fact that just around the corner is the Wyandott Club, affiliated with Tammany, and that Dunes didn't think the Independence League would win out in the last election for Alderman.

It was also learned that the members of the eighth street corner army, even if he should get a license, because it has been discovered that it is too near a fire box, although there has been a new stand at this spot for the last nine years and a fruit dealer has never had any trouble getting a permit to occupy the sidewalk at this corner.

It was also learned that the members of the Bureau of Licenses who live in Cronin's district are members of the club. They are John P. Corrigan and his chief deputy, Gaetano d'Amato.

HESS NOW IN THE TOMBS.

Former Policeman Held for the Grand Jury on Two Serious Charges.

Theodore D. Hess, the former mounted policeman who ran away with Elizabeth Grady, was held for the Grand Jury in $4,000 bail before Magistrate Steiner in the Harlem court yesterday on two charges, one for assault and the other for abduction. Hess was unable to furnish bail and was sent to the Tombs.

When the case was called in the court yesterday morning there was a large crowd there in the expectation that Hess and the girl would be brought face to face, but the court proceedings were brief, and not once did the girl look at the former policeman who was responsible for her downfall.

The girl was accompanied by her father, James Delaney, her aunt, and her uncle, Miss Hurst of South Norwalk, Conn. She clung to her father's arm.

Hess walked up to the bar with head erect, and when Magistrate Steiner asked him if he had anything to say he replied: "I guess there is no use. I'd better waive examination."

Assistant Superintendent Moore of the Gerry society was in court, and he asked the Magistrate to fix the bail at a large amount. Dr. Brown of the Gerry society said that the physical condition of the girl was very bad. He said serious results were likely to follow. The girl looked careworn, and when she was led away she kissed her father good-by in a forlorn way. The girl's father says that he is anxious to take the girl home, where she can be nursed back to good health.

Hess has been trying to make up with his wife, but she said yesterday that she will never have anything to do with him again.

Another Bryan Period.

William J. Bryan will be in these parts for the greater part of this week. He will arrive on Tuesday morning and although no engagement has yet been made for him for that day it is promised that Harry W. Walker, his representative in this city, will find some opportunity for Mr. Bryan to make some public declaration. On Wednesday he will take a trip to Albany and New York to address the Senate and Assembly, and on Thursday he will be the guest of the Board of Trade and Transportation. He will leave the city on Friday night.

Jury Disagrees in Massachusetts Bribery Case.

Boston, June 1.—The jury in the case of S. John Lamoureux, the legislator charged with soliciting and accepting a bribe, came in this morning in the Superior Criminal Court and reported a disagreement. It had been out twenty hours. The case will now go over until fall and there will be a respite for the legislator, who has been unable to serve since his arrest early in March.

PAN STOPS THE AUCTION.

As Result of His Identification of Stolen Goods Only Six Pairs of Corsets Were Left.

As the result of an auction sale advertised to come off at East Second street on Decoration Day, but which was broken up by Headquarters detectives, Abraham Levy, proprietor of the place, was held in $8,000 bail for examination Monday by Magistrate Wahle in the Essex Market police court yesterday morning on a charge of receiving stolen goods.

On the night of May 19 the women's furnishing store of Leopold Pan, at 2772 Third avenue, was robbed of goods to the amount of $2,000. The police have found as yet no trace of the burglars. A close watch has been kept on auction stores and when the advertisement of the Decoration Day sale appeared in a morning paper Pan was notified.

Lieuts. Greene, Gilday and Brennan accompanied Pan to the sale at the Second street address. They were early, and Pan looked the stock over thoroughly. He identified the following goods as his: 105 skirts, 58 waists, 7 raincoats, 9 silk suits, 1 silk waist, 10 cloth suits, 45 jackets and 24 petticoats, or 256 garments in all. When he got through all the stuff that remained for the sale were six pairs of corsets, which he could not positively identify. So the auction proceeded with the six corsets, and when these were disposed of it was all over.

The detectives placed Levy under arrest. He denied knowledge that the goods were stolen. Levy is 38 years old and lives at 221 North Third street, Brooklyn.

Pan told Magistrate Wahle that as the season was well along he would not be able to dispose of the stock unless he could have it now. Levy's counsel consented to the return of the goods, and everything was turned over to Pan except one article of each of the various lots, which the police retained as evidence.

FEARS THIS ARDENT LOVER.

Ryan Shot at Her Because She Wouldn't Marry Him—Work House for Him.

Miss Minnie Hahn of 117 Second street appeared as complainant in the Yorkville police court yesterday against Joseph Ryan, a husky man of 30 years who lives at 640 Stebbins avenue, the Bronx.

"I am afraid he will kill me because I refuse to marry him," the young woman said to Magistrate Whitman. "A month ago he asked me to marry him. I refused as I had often done before. He fired a shot from a revolver at me. The bullet passed between my arm and body and the powder burned my shirt waist."

Three weeks ago the man met her in the street and got her to take a walk with him. When about to pass St. Nicholas Church in Second street he pulled her toward the door and insisted that they go in and get married. A policeman came along just then and appealed to him. The policeman drove the man away.

The complainant handed up a bundle of letters which she received from the man. The court read them and asked Ryan if he wrote them.

"That looks like my writing," he responded after reading one of the letters. The Magistrate committed him to the workhouse.

Chicago to Have a $6,000,000 Hotel.

CHICAGO, June 1.—The realization of a plan, announced more than a year ago, to build a mammoth hotel on the property purchased by the Illinois Life Insurance Company at La Salle and Madison streets is now assured. The structure will be on a much more magnificent scale than was at first contemplated. The new hotel is to be known as the La Salle. It will be built at a total cost of $6,000,000 by a company of Chicago and New York capitalists incorporated in Illinois.

HAYWOOD HAS A DAY IN BED

LACK OF EXERCISE BROUGHT ON INTESTINAL TROUBLE.

Court Adjourns Until To-morrow—A Ball Game Took Precedence Over a Sunday Session—The Prisoner's Food Not Blamed for His Illness—Not a Collapse.

BOISE, Idaho, June 1.—William D. Haywood, who is now on trial here, charged with the murder of ex-Gov. Steunenberg, suffered rather an alarming attack of illness in the county jail early this morning. He is in no danger, however, and is recovering so rapidly that his counsel and the physicians attending him say he will surely be able to be in the court room by Monday morning.

Haywood was attacked by severe pains in the head at 5 o'clock this morning. Deputy Sheriff Deemer, who was on duty, sent at once for County Physician Lewis. Dr. Lewis called in Dr. Colleton and the two prescribed for the prisoner. Dr. Lewis said later that Haywood was suffering from intestinal toxemia but that his condition was not at all serious. The pain, he asserted, that the physicians gave the prisoner morphine. He spent most of the day in bed, though he was out in the jail yard for a few minutes about noon.

When court opened this morning, Lawyer Richardson for the defence made a formal statement of the defendant's illness. He added that it was nothing serious and that undoubtedly Haywood would have been perfectly able to appear in court had it not been for the morphine.

A recess was ordered until 1:30 o'clock, as it was hoped that the case could go on then. At that time, however, Mr. Richardson said that Haywood had been up and dressed, but that he had suffered from nausea and dizziness and had to go back to bed. He was quite sure, however, that his condition would be perfectly recovered by Monday. He thought he would be all right to-morrow if the Judge cared to hold court on Sunday. Lawyer Hawley for the prosecution objected that there was a ball game on for to-morrow, and that or some other consideration appealed to the Court. At all events adjournment was taken until Monday morning.

Haywood's illness disappointed everybody connected with the case, as it had been confidently hoped to complete the jury to-day and start in early Monday morning with the evidence.

The quality of Haywood's food is not blamed for his illness, such a big, robust man that he needs exercise to keep him in shape. It will be attended to hereafter.

There are rumors that Haywood had collapsed under the strain of his trial and that he was rapidly going to pieces. This, however, was contradicted by the lawyers and the Sheriff and his deputies and by the physicians who attended him.
